

Weekly Market Update

Primary market environment: The Ukraine war, interest rates and fears about the economy are still the main influencing factors. The government crisis in England did its part to keep volatility high. For equities, September was the worst month since the financial crisis. The collapse of Credit Suisse's share price triggered concerns about renewed turbulence on the markets.

Primary market barometer

Overall, the mood in the SSA segment is mixed. Tier 1 issuers/supras are enjoying good to very good investor demand, while the smaller sub-sovereigns are finding it much more difficult to fill their books.

With good market timing, in combination with renowned issuer names, covereds with longer maturities of 5 or 6 years can also be placed, as the examples of CRH and Commerzbank show. Nevertheless, the trend towards shorter maturities is intact.

Although the market remains receptive to this segment, issuers must offer attractive spreads to fill the order books. Investors remain very selective. Due to regulatory requirements, among other things, issuers are nevertheless planning further transactions by the end of the year.

After a brief interim recovery, the mood of market participants has clouded over again. At the same time, the fundamental environment does not promise much improvement.

SSA

The German capital market, the most important platform for euro-denominated bonds, remained closed on Monday due to the holiday, so that primary market activity only picked up again somewhat from Tuesday. Overall, signs of fatigue are becoming increasingly visible. The recent appearance of the EFSF is an exception. Investors continued to demand its paper strongly. The order book was 4.3 times oversubscribed and the marketing spread narrowed from MS-17 to MS-19. For the EFSF, it was the last issue of the year, which we believe further boosted demand. The Madrid region, on the other hand, struggled to reach its target volume.

Outlook: Overall, a trend towards higher new issue premiums is emerging in the SSA segment. The demand side is also affected by the fact that asset managers have little free liquidity. Old bond portfolios can currently only be sold at a loss. We expect further issues in the coming weeks, but there is only a small need for refinancing on the part of the federal states and development banks.

Covered Bonds

The oversubscription rates currently observed for Covereds are limited compared to the first months of this year. The order books of Bank of Montreal and Singapore's DBS Bank were oversubscribed 1.2 and 1.3 times, respectively. In addition, rising new issue premiums (NIP) of 8 and 7 bps respectively show that market conditions are increasingly challenging. In the case of UniCredit Bank Czech Republic & Slovakia's first mortgage-backed covered bond issue, the estimated NIP was as high as +15/+20 bps. But there is another way: On Wednesday, the French CRH was able to issue a "long" five-year covered issue. Overall, however, it is noticeable that the transaction was optimised in terms of volume and not primarily in terms of spread, given the volatile market environment. With a final order book of just under 2.1 billion, the issue volume was set at 1.85 billion euros.

While deals from the core segment are already struggling to cross the finish line, this is even more difficult for issuers that do not belong to this group, despite some considerable NIPs. The same applies to the secondary market. With the exception of the ultra-short end, our trading sees predominantly selling interest in cash securities. The motivation is understandable, especially since the majority of bonds lost considerable price value in the course of the year and the low coupons from past times hardly offer a current interest rate.

Outlook: The environment remains challenging. We do not expect the market conditions to change significantly in the coming days. Nevertheless, further issues by strong issuers are to be expected.

"The fears that the uncertain large-scale weather situation would continue at the beginning of the new month have come true. The markets are being shaken up unabated in outright movements. But not only that, there is also a lot of movement on the curves. From steep to flat to inverse and then back around again! A catalyst for the recent movements was definitely the drama around Great Britain, which has certainly already been described, discussed and commented on many times in its script and effects. The significance and conclusions that can be drawn from the market reactions are likely to spoil the mood of the vast majority of players."

Senior Unsecured

This week, both the difficult primary market environment and the simultaneous high refinancing needs of institutions in the senior unsecured segment were once again confirmed: In the risk-off mode dominating at the beginning of the week, only the Danish Jyske Bank showed up with a benchmark transaction on Tuesday. On the following day, the mood on the market brightened noticeably; BBVA and Crédit Agricole immediately took advantage of this momentum and placed a total of EUR 3.5 billion in senior unsecured benchmark paper.

Overall, primary market conditions remain extremely difficult. Jyske, for example, had to offer a new issue premium of around +60/+65 bp for its very defensive 3.5NC2.5-year issue. Despite the conservatively chosen maturity and the supposedly generous spread premium, the final order book was only EUR 635 million, and the spread could only be narrowed by around 10 bp compared to the first indication. Overall, it is noticeable that the placement volume has priority in the structuring of transactions, while issuers accept higher spreads.

Outlook: The general situation is unlikely to change much in the coming days: The overall environment remains extremely volatile and challenging. In view of the geopolitical crises, but also individual corporate news (Credit Suisse), investors are nervous and are focusing on quality and adequate spreads. Short maturities, for example, probably do not yet sufficiently reflect the recent interest rate decisions and have been among the underperformers in recent days. However, banks still have a high need for issuance (capital requirements, high maturities), thus transactions can still be expected when the opportunity is favorable.

"The markets do not come to rest and remain highly volatile in many segments following the interest rate decisions of the central banks. The equity markets have started a strong bear market rally and the iTraxx indices narrowed massively over the week, while at the same time yields fell massively and Bund swap spreads remain near record levels. The cash markets experienced another week of widening."

10/5 Shock for Italy: Moody's rating agency threatens Rome with a bond downgrade to junk bond level. (Börnszeitung)

10/5 Top EU banks exposed to 239 bn USD in fossil fuel assets: A new report by Finance Watch unveiled the exposure of EU banks to fossil fuel assets and called for higher capital requirements to ward off the financial stability risk of stranded fossil fuel assets. (EURACTIV)

10/5 BIS: Buffer usability and cyclicity in the Basel framework: The Basel Committee on Banking Supervision issued a second report on the evaluation of the impact and effectiveness of implemented Basel reforms. As reported by the Bank for International Settlements (BIS), the report finds some indications of a positive relationship between banks' capital headroom and lending while limited evidence emerges that banks' reluctance to use liquidity buffers has affected their lending and market activity. (BIS)

10/4 European banks too optimistic about macro risks according to ECB: European banks are not taking looming economic risks seriously as they enjoy the revenue-boosting benefits of higher interest rates, the European Central Bank Supervisory Board Chairman Andrea Enria said. As reported by Bloomberg, Enria repeated warnings on the risks posed by the business of lending to indebted companies as the ECB will impose higher capital requirements on lenders that don't grapple with those risks.

9/30 EBA publishes Basel III impact report: The European Banking Authority (EBA) today its first mandatory Basel III Monitoring Report which assesses the impact that Basel III full implementation will have on EU banks in 2028. According to this assessment, which uses a significantly larger sample than in previous years and applies the same methodology as the Basel Committee on Banking Supervision (BCBS), the full Basel III implementation would result in an average increase of 15.0% of the current Tier 1 minimum required capital of EU banks. (see our report on the EU Banking Package 2021 dated 5. November 2021)

9/30 BIS: Basel III capital ratios for largest global banks on high levels: Initial Basel III capital ratios increased to the highest level since the beginning of the exercise in 2012, and banks' profits remained at or near record high levels across all regions in H2 2021 according to the latest Basel III monitoring exercise. (BIS, Basel III Monitoring Report)

9/30 Europe faces ‘severe risks’ to financial system, regulators warn: The European Systemic Risk Board (ESRB) have issued an unprecedented warning about “severe risks to financial stability” after concluding Russia’s invasion of Ukraine could create a toxic combination of an economic downturn, falling asset prices and financial market stress. The authority called on regulators to prepare for a potential crisis by requiring financial institutions to build up bigger buffers of capital and provisions that can absorb losses, the Financial Times reports.
