

Weekly Market Update

Primary market environment: Primary market conditions remain challenging despite the recent easing of tensions: Republicans achieve a majority in the House of Representatives in the US midterms, US retail sales rose by 1.3% month-on-month in October and euro area inflation rises above the 10% mark in October for the first time since the introduction of the euro.

Primary market barometer

SSA

Many issuers have largely completed their funding projects for this year. In addition, the widening of spreads on the secondary market is unsettling. We therefore do not expect any significant revival.

Covered Bonds

A historic week: On Monday, the EUR 200 billion sound barrier in issuance volume was broken for the first time. Activity continued unabated with higher spreads and in some cases decent new issue premiums. The near end of the year plays a significant role in this.

Senior Unsecured

After the surprisingly strong revival on the primary market for senior unsecured bonds in the previous week, the high level of activity continues this week. Issuers are queuing up and meeting good demand from investors based on attractive spread offers. Funding reserves continue to expand.

Risk trend indicator: traffic lights somewhat more relaxed

SSA

In the SSA segment, it seems as if issuers have already largely completed their funding projects for this year. In addition, we believe that issuers have been unsettled by developments on the secondary market. For example, the spreads of German federal states with long maturities have widened noticeably recently. In principle, duration is avoided, as the past weeks have already shown.

Nevertheless, a heavyweight, the EU, came to the market this week with a dual tranche. The 10.25-year "green tranche" had an order book of almost EUR 42 billion. It was finally priced at MS+1 and a new issue premium of 5 bp. The 30.3-year bond also enjoyed strong investor demand. The notional bid-to-cover ratio was even higher at 11.8x. With a final marketing spread of 74 bps, the new issue premium was also 5 bps above the relevant secondary market curve. For understandable reasons, other issuers did not want to compete with this.

Outlook: We do not expect the primary market to pick up significantly in the coming week. Possibly one or the other federal state will still show itself in the short maturity segment.

Covered Bonds

As already suspected in the previous week, the momentum on the primary market continued at last. The magic barrier of EUR 200 billion since the beginning of the year was already broken at the beginning of the week. And this despite the fact that the market environment still holds one or two challenges. Higher spread concessions and the granting of new issue premiums, some of which are significant, are keeping the locomotive under steam. The approaching end of the year is also narrowing the window of opportunity for liquid markets.

„Turnover (secondary market) is like walking down a one-way street and consists for the most part of bid requests. The spreads vs. swaps are widening, which is also due to the fact that the primary market, which is running at full steam, only functions if generous NIPs are granted. The interaction between these same NIPs with valuations in the secondary market is causing spreads to rise. The massive relative increase in the price of covered vs. EGBs (bund/swap tightening >20 bps in recent weeks) is another key driver.

Comment from the Helaba trading floor

The motto of the last few weeks has been: short maturities are the trump card. It is therefore not surprising that the issuer with the shortest covered bond maturity this week - ING Bank with a 3-year bond - generated the highest order book.

The few buyers on the secondary market are cherry-picking and, unsurprisingly, are clustered at the short end of the curve. Due to the structure of the curve, this area is the most suitable for venturing an investment. Central banks are largely conspicuous by their absence and do not provide any support worth mentioning. In our view, the uncertainties in a fragile overall market remain and are likely to keep spreads high.

Outlook: Although no transaction has been officially announced yet, we expect further issuance in the coming week. Pre-funding and possible TLTRO redemptions - estimates are for a redemption on 23 November of up to EUR 750 bn - could favour this. Shorter maturities remain the first choice.

Senior Unsecured

After the surprisingly strong revival last week, the busy activity in the primary market for senior unsecured bank bonds in EUR benchmark format with fixed coupon continued this week. Since Monday, EUR 6.7 billion has been placed in 9 transactions, with order books more than twice as high. The robust market environment was reflected, among other things, in the fact that longer maturities and issuers from the periphery were also able to score.

ABN AMRO Bank, for example, placed a dual tranche with non-preferred rank in the volume of EUR 1.25 billion with a maturity of 7.3 years and EUR 1.0 billion over 12 years, with the order book for the latter showing an oversubscription rate of an impressive 3x. In this environment, less familiar names such as Raiffeisen Bank Zrt. from Hungary and the Greek Piraeus Bank also came out of the woodwork. However, the houses had to offer high spreads to get desired investor interest, and spread tightening in the secondary market was not quite as strong as it was a few weeks ago. In our opinion, this reflects the high level of nervousness currently prevailing on the market.

Sentiment was supported, among other things, by the now largely completed reporting season for banks: The major European banks demonstrated very solid credit ratios for Q3 2022 and have high risk buffers in the current crisis environment. The rapid increase in net interest income in the core business is particularly encouraging. This should more than compensate for the loss of income brought about by the ECB's TLTRO III program. The repayment announcement tomorrow (Nov. 18) is eagerly awaited. According to our expectation, it could even be lower than the consensus estimate because banks want to maintain their liquidity ratios for the time being. (see our publication "European banks: Q3 results instil confidence" of Nov. 16, 2022).

Outlook: Issuers are taking advantage of the comparatively favorable market window for prefinancing in order to be well prepared for potentially even more difficult times in the global crisis environment and to ensure compliance with their regulatory requirements (MREL/TLAC). The brisk primary market activity could therefore continue next week, as we expect, in a friendly market environment. However, the year is drawing to a close and many issuers have largely implemented their issuance plans, in some cases even exceeding them. We therefore expect a slowdown in activity in December at the latest.

„New issues are pursued in all maturities and liability ranks with high coupons, the likes of which have not been seen for many years. However, the secondary market has shown a split performance. On the one hand, last week's new bonds benefited from the squeeze after the US CPI data and are trading much tighter - e.g. Jyske 11/27, and the new UCGIM 11/27 as the high flyer - carried by the good market sentiment. This week's new issues are still trading slightly higher.

Short news

11/15 Reuters: Euro banks face 'direct hit' to profits from house price slide: Europe's banks risk a significant hit to their profits if house prices across the region begin to slide, regulators and rating agencies warn. While banks' robust balance sheets mean declining house prices are unlikely to pose a systemic risk, the scale of lenders' exposure to the property sector means they could face a hit to earnings, Reuters reports.

11/15 European Supervisory authorities launch joint Call for Evidence on greenwashing: The three European Supervisory Authorities (EBA, EIOPA and ESMA – ESAs) today published a Call for Evidence on greenwashing to gather input from stakeholders on how to understand the key features, drivers and risks associated with greenwashing and to collect examples of potential greenwashing practices.

11/11 Fitch Ratings: Spanish Covered Bonds Are Now Aligned with EU Standards: Spanish cédulas hipotecarias (CH) are more closely aligned with their European peers owing to new mandatory liquidity mechanisms offering payment continuity in stress scenarios, and selected mortgage pools securing outstanding covered bonds, Fitch Ratings says in a new report. Spain's implementation of the EU Covered Bonds Directive on 8 July 2022 represents a "big-bang" for the cédulas market, in Fitch's view. It strengthens the governance framework, adds liquidity protection, and enables maturity extensions.

11/10 Russia activities RBI: Russia's VTB Bank PJSC is discussing a scheme to exchange its European assets for the Russian assets of Austria-based Raiffeisen Bank International AG, but no solution has been found regarding the potential scheme at the political level, news agency TASS reported, citing VTB CEO Andrey Kostin. RBI's Russian unit is one of Russia's systemically important banks.

11/10 ESG Due Diligence framework: Several EU member states, including Germany, France and Italy, are calling on the European Commission to shield or fully exclude the financial sector from the proposed Corporate Sustainability Due Diligence framework, EU documents seen by Reuters showed.

11/10 Spanish bank tax: Spain's ruling coalition put forward amendments to its banking tax proposal, widening its scope to include local units of foreign financial institutions under direct ECB supervision, regardless of the amount of their revenue, Reuters reported. The move comes after the ECB raised concerns over the temporary bank levy, which aims to raise €3 billion by 2024, saying it could hurt banks' capital and negatively impact competition and financial sector stability.

Leisure tip for the weekend: Bergpark Wilhelmshöhe in Kassel

Bergpark Wilhelmshöhe - With an area of 2.4 square kilometers, Bergpark Wilhelmshöhe in Kassel is the largest mountain park in Europe and has been a UNESCO World Heritage since 2013. The impressive sight in Hesse was created as a park as early as 1696 and expanded again and again in the following 150 years. The Bergpark Wilhelmshöhe offers not only a beautiful view over Kassel, but also many architectural highlights, such as the Wilhelmshöhe Palace, which today houses, among other things, the art gallery "Old Masters" and presents about 500 paintings, and shows an excellent overview of the European painting series from the late Gothic to Classicism. Another highlight in the Bergpark is the 11.3 m tall statue of Hercules, which is enthroned on the top of a steep pyramid on a grotto structure on the summit of the Karlsberg.
