

Weekly Market Update

Primary market environment: In the US, the threat of default has been averted. At the same time, price pressure is easing in Germany, Spain, France and Italy. These factors, as well as the fact that inflation and interest rate concerns have been further suppressed and expectations of interest rate hikes have been subdued, are supporting the primary market environment.

Primary market barometer

While the weather barometer (at least in Germany) has been yellow like the sun this week, the issuance barometer for SSAs has been and remains clearly in the green. For the next (short) week, however, we expect less primary market activity.

Covered Bonds

In the covered bond segment, the momentum was in favour of 10-year paper. The generous new issue premiums certainly helped. This gives hope to imitators even in prospect of the coming short week.

Senior Unsecured

The primary market for senior unsecured bank bonds was extremely active this week. Issuers will continue to take advantage of friendly market windows ahead of the summer break and the next quarterly reporting season.

Risk trend indicator: New issuances lead to some spread compression

The recent negative factors - such as the US debt ceiling debate - and profit-taking following the large number of new issues are reflected in our red-coloured secondary market risk trend indicator. However, a longer-term trend has not yet been established.

SSAs

The SSA segment was abuzz with issuance activity this week. Interest in the North Rhine-Westphalia bond reached dizzying heights. Falling inflation rates in the eurozone, the resolution of the US debt crisis and the rebalancing at the end of the month are likely to have been among the drivers. Hence, the order book for the EUR 2bn 10-year sustainability bond was over EUR 13bn, with the spread tightening by 3bp to MS+3bp. The sustainability component attracted a large number of ESG investors: According to market reports, this investor group took two-thirds of the allocation. The ten-year issue adds to the issuer's sustainability bond curve.

Outlook: After this eventful week, activity is likely to be lower, especially as the week is shortened again in Germany and Austria due to public holidays. Nevertheless, we expect investor demand to remain strong.

Covered Bonds

The performance of Crédit Agricole, Rabobank and Crédit Mutuel Arkéa in 10-year covered bonds is proof that there is confirmed hope for a pick-up in longer-dated bonds in the covered bond segment this week. As in the case of SSAs, attractive new issue premiums and the "ESG touch" are supporting order book dynamics. Last but not least, the aforementioned subdued expectations for interest rate hikes are boosting investor behaviour.

Firstly, Crédit Agricole Home Loan SFH posted an impressive result. The EUR 1.25bn transaction generated a final order book of over EUR 2.7bn, with over 100 investors participating. The final spread of MS+33bp represents a new issue premium of 5bp.

The issues by Arkéa Home Loan SFH and Rabobank were also well received by investors. The issuers were able to tighten their spreads by 4 basis points compared to the first spread announcement, while offering investors attractive new issue premiums.

Although there were only three issuers on the primary covered bond market this week, the total volume of EUR 3 billion is quite respectable and brings the year-to-date issuance to around EUR 125 billion.

Outlook: Following the encouraging issuance results, more issuers are likely to follow.

"The tentative scanning of longer maturities that has been going on for weeks at least allows the vague conclusion that some investors are afraid of missing the yield trend. However, it remains to be seen whether this will trigger a secondary dynamic. All in all, turnover across all maturities is rather subdued and one cannot say that there is no secondary material in the shop window. Moreover, the market is still in the "ECB wind-down phase"! Due to the continued high issuance activity, I consider the investment demand sufficiently satisfied - it stands in the way of an ongoing performance!"

Senior Unsecured

The primary market for senior unsecured bank bonds had an extremely busy week, despite the public holiday on Monday. A total of nine preferred and four non-preferred transactions in EUR benchmark format were observed. There was a rich diversity of issuers, regions, maturities and structures (social, green, floater, sub-Bmk etc.). In addition to established permanent issuers, rarer issuers from the periphery were also available for selection. The maturities offered range from two to eight years.

Particularly in preferred transactions, some issuers also ventured onto the market with smaller volumes. The total issue volume in the course of this week amounted to a respectable EUR 9.6 billion, with order books mostly well filled. On the basis of attractive new issue spreads, investors were able to realize pleasing spread tightening in the aftermath.

Outlook: The issuance pipeline remains well filled in view of high maturities and strict bail-in requirements. The friendly market window is being actively used by issuers, especially as the summer vacations start - with the Scandinavian countries - at the end of June.

"The stock markets have recently retreated somewhat from their highs. The iTraxx indices were volatile, but are currently at cyclical lows. Cash traded a bit wider during the week as investors' focus remains on new issues and their attractive NIPs of 10-20 bps. Secondary spreads are widening as a result. The performance of recent new issues has been split, ranging from 1 bp tightening (yesterday's BFCM dual tranche) to 3-5 bps widening in issuances earlier this week. Negative sentiment due to the protracted US debt ceiling debate and some weak economic data weighed on the market. In addition, market participants are aware that the primary pipeline is very full before the summer and bonds need to be absorbed."

Leisure tip for the weekend: Barefoot path in Moers-Repelen (near Duisburg)

"Barefoot through nature" - enjoying the elements of nature with all your senses - is what the "loam pastor" Emanuel Felke practised and recommended to his spa guests more than 100 years ago. The barefoot path in the Jungbornpark in Moers-Repelen consists of two parts. On the one hand, there is a meadow and woodland path of more than 1 kilometre through the park, which links the sites of the former health resorts. This path is open to the public and has several stations where you can balance and feel different surfaces. On the other hand, there is an "intensive area" where you can walk on water and clay and feel many different materials.
